

GOLD as CURRENCY

Gold has served as the most important monetary standard throughout history. It is measured in troy ounces and the price of gold is typically stated in terms of the cost of one Troy ounce.

Historically, the United States has fixed the price of gold. The price of an ounce of gold was fixed at about $20.00 from 1786 until 1934, at which point the price was raised to $35.00. In 1968 a two-tiered pricing structure was established, and by 1975 the price of gold was allowed to fluctuate like any other commodity. On January 21st, 1980 the price of gold reached its peak of $850, and by the year 2000 the price dropped to $272.

Gold Average Price of One Troy Ounce Since 2000

2000	$279	2009	$969	2018	$1268	A Troy ounce is about 31.1 Grams. At $3000 per ounce one Gram is worth about $100. One Gram is the weight of a $1 bill. Five Grams is the weight of one nickel and would be worth $500. One Troy ounce is the weight of 6 nickels.

Pennyweight and Grains ????

You will also hear prospectors talking about gold measured in Pennyweight and Grains. Pennyweight is a standard unit of measurement used in the precious metals industry. It originated as a unit of the Troy weight system in 15th Century England and remains a standard for valuing precious metals today. During 15th century England, the weight of an English penny was exactly 1/20th of a Troy ounce. Therefore, there are 20 Pennyweights in a Troy ounce. This system further divides the Pennyweight into Grains. There are 24 Grains per Pennyweight and therefore 480 Grains per Troy ounce. Many modern digital scales will measure in Troy Ounces, Grams, Pennyweight, or Grains.
